STATE DEMOCRATIC TICKET

FOR GOVERNOR:
PHILIP W. MCKINNEY, of Farmville.

FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR:
J. HOGE TYLER,
of Palaski.

FOR ATTORNEY-GENERAL:
R. TAYLOR SCOTT, of Fauquier.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Captain R. Taylor Scott, Democratic candidate for Attorney General of Virginia, will address the voters of Tazewell county, at the Court House, on Tuesday, the 24th day of September, 1889, (Court Day).

WIDESPREAD REBELLION.

Although he may appear to ignore the revolt among Republicans against his candidacy, General Mahone can not but realize that it has already assumed such proportions as to jeopardize his election; and, further, that when all the elements of opposition to "Mahoneism" in the ranks of that party shall have been organized and consolidated, it will insure his overwhelming defeat.

Let him but take a cursory survey of the progress of the rebellion and "behold what a great matter a little fire kindleth!"

John Wise said that if Mahone was nominated he would go fishing on election day, and thus set an example of "forbearance" to his followers.

Ex Senator Riddleberger says he is going to try to eliminate the boss.

Ex Governor Cameron says he will not support Mahone, and that there are 15,000 Republicans in the State who will vote against bossism.

General Grover is busying himself organizing the anti-Mahone forces.

Major Hine, of Fairfax, declares that "Mahoneism and Republicanism are incompatible."

Mr. C. A. Heerens, of Montgomery county, says he is going gunning for Mahone's scalp.

Mr. George C. Rornd, the Republican leader in Prince William county, met Major Tyler, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, at the station on Monday, drove him over to Brentsville, introduced him to the audience, and announced from the stand his intention of supporting the entire Democratic ticket.

The Harrisonburg Spirit of the Valley announced emphatically the day before the Norfolk convention, so as to leave no ground for misapprehension or misunderstanding, that it would not support General Mahone if nominated. It sticks to what it said.

The Wytheville Patriot and Herald, Col. Pendleton's paper, has taken a precisely similar attitude.

The Loudon Telephone, the leading Republican paper in that section of the State, says: "No, in sorrow, rather than in anger, we say we cannot support the ticket."

But, still more influential and significant, as indicating the formidable character of this determined movement on the part of intelligent and self-respecting Republicans to emancipate their party in this State from the curse of bossism, is the advanced position taken by the Valley Virginian, the leading Republican paper of the State. That journal declares:

"GEN. MAHONE'S ELECTION WOULD, WE BELIEVE, BE A CALAMITY TO THE COMMONWEALTH, IN THAT IT WOULD PARALYZE INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS; ARREST THE INFLOW OF CAPITAL AND ENTERPRISE; AND INAUGURATE A REIGN OF HATE AND REVENGE THAT WOULD DESTROY AND AGGRAVATE EVERY RELATION OF BUSINESS AND EVERY INFLUENCE THAT CONTEMPLATES THE MATERIAL PROGRESS OF THE STATE."

Let all Republicans who have the interest and welfare of the State truly at heart, ponder these pregnant words thoughtfully, and let Mahone see in them the hand writing on the wall which foreshadows the political doom that awaits him.

In this contest he cannot even rely on his "faithful allies" as of yore. He has given three or four little Federal offices to colored men in the State, it is true, but he makes a miscalculation if he reckons that their allegiance is to be retained so cheaply. Knowing, as they do, that he will have a big campaign fund to spend this year, they will jealously watch its distribution, and if the Boss gets their "united and undivided support," he will have to pay for it to a very considerable extent.—Lynchburg Virginian.

THE NEW YORK TIMES ON THE SITUATION IN VIRGINIA.

It is a contest in which the President is leagued with one of the most picturesque political brigands in the Union. Mr. Harrison must know the character of the man with whom he is dealing, for abundant information has been given to him. It is fair to assume, therefore, that he has entered into the alliance with his eyes open, and has committed the Republican party to the support of one of the most unscrupulous politicians in the country.

"The nomination of Gen. Mahone is unquestionably the strongest that could have been made. Nevertheless, he is beaten from the very jump. In the first place, the Democratic party has been put on guard. The nomination itself was a warning that the fight would be hot and fierce. Its significance, therefore, is fully understood, and when to this is added a complete knowledge of Mahone's methods, of his audacity, his unscrupulousness, and his chicanery, his contempt for morality, and his desperation, it may be fairly assumed that the Democratic leaders appreciate the situation. Mahone has more than his match in Senator John S. Barbour, and while it is true that Mr. Barbour is no longer chairman of the State Committee and, ex officio, in charge of the conduct of the campaign, the party will still have the benefit of his wisdom and experience. If Gen. Mahone is an organizer of unsurpassed ability, Mr. Barbour is a tactician who can beat Mahone at his own game. To him, therefore, the Democrats of Virginia are turning, and in his discretion and skill, as well as his loyalty to his party, they have confidence which amounts to absolute conviction."

While Basil Gordon is the State Chairman, Mr. Barbour will be the power behind the throne, and there is no doubt that he will be the actual, if not the nominal, manager of the fight which the Virginia Democracy will wage and win.

"Gen. Mahone's withdrawal from the Democratic party is a matter of history. The manner of his defection was in keeping with the character of the man. It was the familiar 'confidence' game in politics. He could never have been elected to the Senate of the United States as a Republican, for, if he had made that issue in the election of the Legislature, he would have been beaten out of his boots. Mahone had friends as a Democrat whom he lost irretrievably as soon as he had thrown off his masquerading attire. In Southwest Virginia, the home of the mountaineers, a gallant and sturdy stock, he had no little strength eight years ago. But he held this following in virtue of his allegiance to the Democratic party, and by reason of his successful obscuration of the issues involved in the election of Cameron as Governor.

"Four years later, when he had made his record in the United States Senate, when he was an open and avowed Republican, the Southwest turned upon him with all the angry indignation of a man who has been betrayed by the false pretensions and protestations of the 'confidence' rogue. He was defeated there, and Fitz Lee went to the Governor's mansion in place of John S. Wise.

"Mahone is as cold as a fish in arctic waters. Wise had to abandon the Mahone organization because he could not remain within it and preserve his independence. He had to be a servant and a sycophant, or else he had to be a rebel. He chose to be the latter, so did ex Governor Cameron. There was no help for it. They had either to kiss a hand that was always snuffing them or else organize a rebellion and enjoy the independence of revolt. So they 'kicked' rather than 'kissed.'"

EXTRACTS FROM THE VALLEY VIRGINIAN, REPUBLICAN.

Mahone represents nothing but the most odious phase of machine politics—of boss despotism.

Many Republicans will vote the Democratic ticket, and many more will not vote at all.

We do not advise any Republican to vote the Democratic ticket, but we do advise them not to vote for Mahone.

His election would, in our opinion, be a calamity to the State.

It would mean four years of persecution, turmoil, strife and material disaster.

It would arrest progress, by keeping from the State capital and enterprise, and hold in suspense every industry now being inaugurated.

Mahone represents nothing but himself. However fair the platform adopted in the canvass which nominated him may appear to those who may fancy such a piece of literary consolation, there is not an issue that it presents that will not be overshadowed by Mahone and his methods.

The Republicans who will not wear his collar are proscribed by him more relentlessly than they are by the Democrats.

His machine is employed to persecute Republicans and deny their rights within the party.

The "civil liberty" that he represents, is the liberty to wear his collar, sneeze when he takes snuff, and obey his orders without a murmur or question, when he gives them.

We would suggest to the Republican press of the North to keep their hands out of this contest in Virginia.

They know nothing about the internal workings of Mahone's machine. If they did they would not have a word of protest to enter against those Republicans who do not mean to be governed by it.

It is a fight against the most cruel and relentless political despotism ever known in this country.

It is a struggle to emancipate the party from the clutch of the most unreasonable and selfish leader that was ever entrusted with power.

It is a contest to break the force of an influence, which, if successful, will wreck the Republican party of the country.

A thousand times better that it should be repudiated in Virginia than that it should receive strength and vigor here to be injected into the campaign of 1892.

The Virginian has never faltered in its support of the Republican party and its nominees since 1872. It has blazed the way for every Republican advance from that day to this.

We believe that we are discharging a duty to Virginia, to the Republican party of the State and nation, and to the Republican administration in appealing to our Republican friends to join in one supreme effort to emancipate the party from the cruel and despotic sway of a relentless dictator and save Virginia from a political scourge.

The best interests of the Republican party in the State and nation demand that such tyranny should be rebuked and will be by from 25,000 to 50,000 majority.

Believing that it is not to the interest of Virginia or the Republican party of the State and nation that Gen. Mahone should be elected Governor, the Virginian will not support him and its editor will not vote for him—not if he had been nominated by a dozen packed conventions, and were backed by a dozen National Executive Committees. If that be treason then make the most of it.
